RAPID RIDE ON A BULL

MRS. MAC EROY HEROINE OF A WILD ADVENTURE.

Willie Stevens, of Equinunk, Kills a Deer with a Stone-The Erie Strike Still On-Death's Doings. The Smith Family Reunion.

Special to the Scranton Tribune.

Susquehanna, Aug. 13.-Sherman has woman visitor who has ridden a mad and struck the deer, crippling it. The bull bareback. She is still alive.

The heroine of this wild adventure is Mrs. Dora MacEroy, of Asbury

Mrs. MacElroy is an experienced horsewoman and has all her life been accustomed to being with horses and

Her relatives at Sherman have a fine herd of Jersey cattle-sleek and well groomed-and Mrs. MacElroy, who is visiting there, has been in the habit of going down to the feeding trough every night to watch the animals at their

It chanced that the cattle fed from strike is still here. Like Banquos' a huge trough beside a stout fence.

The old bull was looking parteularly gentle the other night, according to

Mrs. MacElroy, and even munched some grain from her hand. As he stood there it occurred to her that his broad back would make an excellent

The thought no sooner entered her head than she shouted to her companions to watch her, climbed to the opmost rail of the fence and vaulted lightly onto the bull's back.

The effect upon the bull was startling, to say the least. With a terrifying bellow he reared on his hind legs, shaking himself and snorting violently. The terrified woman had presence of mind enough to reach forward and clutch at the buil's horns.

An instant later the bull shot forward like a builet. Involuntarily his lature. No names will be given as the rider clung to the slippery horns with gentlemen are otherwise respectable. every muscle on the strain. The top hars separating the barnyard from the road were down and the of seeing all the Smith's together. bull, as might be expected, chose the direction of the road, toward which he made a wild dash. The lower bars were up, however, and as he saw them he came to a sudden stop, nearly throwing Mrs. MacElroy over his head,

The frightened farm hands and defense who had seen the bull start ran after him. The bull, catching sight of Interment was made in the Grand them, once more lifting up his head, cleared the lower bars at a leap and started down the road at terrifying speed, leaving those following far be-

Mrs. MacElroy was about to leap from his back, when some distance shead a man suddenly turned into the road driving a gig and wearing a bright red shirt. The color caught the eye of the buil. He instantly ceased his pawing and once more started along the read at terrific speed. The man saw his dan ger and whipped his horse. The bull's rider clung to her steed like a jockey. The awful race which followed lasted for fully a mile. Mrs. MacElroy says that toward the end she felt her strength fast going from her and closad her eyes, expecting to be hurled to the ground and perhaps to her death at every plunge. Fortunately the road at this point ran up a step hill, and in climbing it the bull somewhat slackened his pace This probably saved Mrs. MacElroy's life. The bull reached the top only to see the red shirt disappearing in the distance. In the face of this disappointment the animal turned quickly and started for home. In turning he wrenched his rider suddenly loose from her seat, throwing her, by a fortunate accident, into a clump of bushes .

When her friends reached her she was in a dead faint. Physicians were hastily summoned and she was carried Beyond a severe shock she had, strangely enough, suffered no injuries The bull, since his wild adventure has been intractable and the owner has been forced to confine him.

The animal shows a fierce aversion to women and whenever he catches sight of one he paws the ground and bellows furiously.

He was one of the gentlest creatures in the herd previous to his runaway. After a very brief illness, James McMahon, a former resident of this in the sewerage project was held last from a broken arm, is somewhat im-
